Salad Days Farm

ABOUT

Salad Days Farm is owned by Maggie and Jarrod Dungan. Maggie started the farm in 2015 as a first generation farmer while husband Jarrod worked his full time conventional job. After starting their family and moving to Kentucky, the Dungan's decided to start their farm using Maggie's background in nutrition and the families desire to be self sustaining. The name "Salad Days" was coined by Shakespeare in 1606 and has been adapted to mean a time in one's life when things are vibrant, full of vim, vigor and at the peak of one's abilities. Farming encompasses both of these meanings, so Maggie and Jarrod can happily say they're always living the salad days.
